They would not suffer the prince to confer with, or very rarely to see, his myself, whom they pretended he should forthwith marry. Clarendon.

Nice honour still engages to requite
False myself and proud with flight for flight. Granville.

6. A term of contemptuous address.
Look you, pale myself,
Do you perceive the ghastliness of her eye? Shakespeare.

7. A whore; a concubine.
MISTRUST. n. f. [mis and trust.] Diffidence; suspicion; want of confidence.
He needs not our myself, since he delivers
Our offices, and what we have to do,
To the direction just. Shakespeare. Macbeth.
Not then myself, but tender love, enjoins
That I should mind thee oft; and mind thou me! Milton.

MISTRUST. v. a. [mis and trust.] To suspect; to doubt; to regard with diffidence.
Will any man alledge those mentioned human infirmities, as reasons why these things should be myself or doubted of. Hooker, b. ii.

By a divine instinct, mens minds myself
Enfuing danger; as by proof we see,
The waters swell before a boisterous storm.
Fate her own book myself at the sight,
On that side war, on this a single fight. Cowley.
The relation of a Spartan youth, that suffered a fox concealed under his robe to tear out his bowels, is myself by men of business. Brown.

The gen'rous train complies,
Nor fraud myself in virtue's fair disguise. Pope's Odyssey.

MISTRUSTFUL. adj. [myself and full.] Diffident; doubting.
I hold it cowardice
To rest myself, where a noble heart
Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love. Shakespeare.
Here the myself lowl no harm suspects,
So safe are all things which our king protects. Waller.

MISTRUSTFULNESS. n. f. [myself and full.] Diffidence; doubt.
Without him I found a weakness, and a myself of myself, as one itrayed from his best strength, when at any time I mist him. Sidney, b. ii.

MISTRUSTFULLY. adv. [myself and full.] With suspicion; with mistrust.

MISTRUSTLESS. adj. [myself and full.] Confident; unsuspecting.

MISTY. adj. [myself.]
1. Clouded; overpread with mists.
The morrow fair with purple beams
Dispers'd the shadows of the myself night. Fairy Queen.
Loud howling wolves arouse the jades,
That drag the trackish melancholy night;
Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings
Clip dead mens graves; and from their myself jaws
Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air. Shakespeare.
Parents overprize their children, while they behold them through the vapours of affection which alter the appearance, as things seem bigger in myself mornings. Watson.
Now imoaks with show'rs the myself mountain ground,
And floated fields lie undistinguish'd round. Pope.

2. Obscure; dark; not plain.
MISUNDERSTAND. v. a. [mis and understand.] To misunderstand; to mistake.
The words of Tertullian, as they are by them alledged, are myself. Hooker, b. ii.
He failed in distinguishing these two regions, both called Eden, and he altogether myself two of the four rivers. Raleigh's Hist. of the World.

In vain do men take sanctuary in such myself expressions as these; and from a false persuasion that they cannot reform their lives never go about it. Soutb.
This if it be neglected, will make the reader very much mistake and myself his meaning. Locke.
Were they only designed to instruct the three succeeding generations, they are in no danger of being myself. Addison on ancient Medals.

MIT

The example of a good man is the best direction we can follow in the performance of our duty; the most exact rules and precepts are subject to be myself; some at least will mistake their meaning. Rogers's Sermon.

MISUNDERSTANDING. n. f. [mis and understand.]
1. Difference; disagreement.
There is a great myself betwixt the corpulent philosophers and the chemists. Bayle.

For heaven decreed to conceal the fame,
To make the miscreant more to feel his shame. Fairfax.

MISY. n. f. A kind of mineral.
Misy contains no cupreous vitriol but only that of iron: it is a very beautiful mineral, of a fine bright yellow colour, and of a loose and friable structure, and much resembles the golden mar'asites. Hill's Mat. Med.

MITE. n. f. [mite, French; mitz, Dutch; mita, Lat.]
1. A small insect found in cheese or corn; a weevil.
Virginity breeds mite, much like a cheese, consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding its own stomach. Shakespeare's All's well that ends well.
The polish'd glass, whose small convex
Enlarges to ten millions of degrees,
The mite invisible else, of nature's hand
Least animal. Philosoph.
The idea of two is as distinct from the idea of three, as the magnitude of the whole earth is from that of a mite. Locke.

2. The twentieth part of a grain.
The Seville piece of eight contains thirteen pennyweight twenty-one grains and fifteen mite, of which there are twenty in the grain, of sterling silver, and is in value forty-three English pence and eleven hundredths of a penny. Arbuthnot.

3. Any thing proverbially small; the third part of a tarding.
Though any man's corn they do bite,
They will not allow him a mite. Tupper's Husb.
Are you defrauded, when he feeds the poor,
Our mite decreases nothing of your store. Dryden.
Did I'er my mite withhold
From the impotent and old. Swift's Miscel.

4. A small particle.
Put blue-bottles into an ant-hill they will be stained with red, because the ants thrust in their stings, and infill into them a small mite of their stinging liquor, which hath the same effect as oil of vitriol. Ray on Creation.

MITELLA. n. f. A plant.
The mitella hath a perennial root; the cup of the flower consists of one leaf, and is divided into five parts; the flower consists of five leaves, which expand in form of a rose; the ovary

MITHRIDATE. n. f. [mithridate, Fr.]
Mithridate is one of the capital medicines of the shops, consisting of a great number of ingredients, and has its name from its inventor Mithridates, king of Pontus. Quincy.
But you of learning and religion,
And virtue, and such ingredients, have made
A mithridate, whose operation
Keeps off, or cures, what can be done or said. Donne.

MITHRIDATE MYSTARD. n. f. [mithridate, Latin.]
The flower of the mithridate consists of four leaves placed in form of a cross, out of whose cup rises the pointal, which afterward becomes a smooth roundish fruit, having commonly a lacy border, and slit on the upper side, divided into two cells by an intermediate partition placed obliquely with respect to the valves, and furnished with smooth roundish seeds; to which may be added the undivided leaves, which distinguish it from cresses. Miller.

MITIGANT. adj. [mitigans, Lat.] Lenient; lenitive.
To MITIGATE. v. a. [mitigo, Lat. mitiger, Fr.]
1. To soften; to make less rigorous.
We could greatly wish, that the rigour of their opinion were allayed and mitigated. Hooker, b. v.

2. To alleviate; to make mild; to alluage.
Mithras are milder'd by advice discreet,
And council mitigates the greatest smart. Fairy Queen.
All it can do is, to devise how that which must be endured may be mitigated, and the inconveniences thereof counter-acted as near as may be, that, when the best things are not possible, the best may be made of those that are. Hooker.

3. To mollify; to make less severe.
I undertook
Before thee: and, not repenting, thus obtain
Of right, that I may mitigate their doom,
On me deriv'd. Milton's Par. Lost, b. x.

4. To cool; to moderate.
A man has frequent opportunity of mitigating the fierceness of a party, of softening the envious, quieting the angry, and rectifying the prejudiced. Addison's Spectator.

MITIGATION. n. f. [mitigatio, Lat. mitigatio, Fr. from mitigare.] Abatement of any thing penal, harsh, or painful.
The king would not have one penny abated of that granted to him by parliament, because it might encourage other countries to pray the like release or mitigation. Bacon.
They caused divers subjects to be indicted of sundry crimes; and when the bills were found they committed them, and suffered them to languish long in prison, to extort from them great fines and ransoms, which they termed compositions and mitigations. Bacon's Henry VII.

MITRE. n. f. [mitre, Fr. mitra, Latin.]
1. An ornament for the head.
Nor Pantheus, thee, thy mitre nor the bands
Of awful Phœbus, sav'd from impious hands. Dryden.

2. A kind of episcopal crown.
Bishopricks or burning, mitres or faggots, have been the rewards of different persons, according as they pronounced these consecrated syllables, or not. Watts.

MITRE. n. f. [mitre, Fr. from mitra.] A kind of joining two mitres together. Miller.

MITRE. adj. [mitre, Fr. from mitra.] Adorned with a mitre.
Shall the loud herald our success relate,
Or mitred priests appoint the solemn day? Prior.
Mitred abbots, among us, were those that were exempt from the diocesan's jurisdiction, as having within their own precincts episcopal authority, and being lords in parliament were called abbots sovereign. Ayliffe's Parergon.

MITTENT. adj. [mittens, Lat.] Sending forth; emitting.
The fluxion proceedeth from humours peccant in quantity or quality, thrust forth by the part mittent upon the inferior weak parts. Wijeman's Surgery.

MITTENS. n. f. [mittaines, French.]

He sent out of his mouth a blast of fire, and out of his spurs and tempests; and they were all mixed together. 2 Esdr.

MOB

I have chosen an argument, mixt of religious and civil considerations; and likewise mixt between contemplative and active. Bacon's holy War.

3. To join; to mingle.
Brothers, you mix your sadness with some fear;
This is the English not the Turkish court. Shakespeare.

MIXEN. n. f. [mixen, Saxon.] A dunghil; a layfall.
MIXION. n. f. [mixion, Fr. from mix.] Mixture; confusion of one body with another.
Others perceiving this rule to fall short, have pieced it out by the mixtion of vacuity among bodies, believing it is that which makes one rarer than another. Digby on Bodies.
Though we want a proper name, yet are they not to be lightly past over as elementary or subterraneous mixtions. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. ii.

MIXTLY. adv. [from mix.] With coalition of different parts into one.

MIXTURE. n. f. [mixtura, Latin.]
1. The act of mixing; the state of being mixed.
O happy mixture, wherein things contrary do so qualify and correct the one the danger of the other's excess, that neither boldness can make us presume, as well as we are kept under with the sense of our own wretchedness; nor, while we trust in the mercy of God through Christ Jesus, fear be able to tyrannize over us! Hooker, b. v.
Those liquors are expelled out of the body which, by their mixture, convert the aliment into an animal liquid. Arbuth.
I, by baleful furies led,
With monstrous mixture stain'd my mother's bed. Pope.

2. A mass formed by mingled ingredients.
Come vial—What if this mixture do not work at all?
Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet.

3. That which is added and mixed.
Neither can God himself be otherwise understood, than as a mind free and disentangled from all corporeal mixtures, perceiving and moving all things. Stillingfleet.
Cicero doubts whether it were possible for a community to exist, that had not a prevailing mixture of piety in its constitution. Addison's Freeholder, N<sup>o</sup>. 29.
While we live in this world, where good and bad men are blended together, and where there is also a mixture of good and evil widely distributed by God, to serve the ends of his providence. Atterbury's Sermon.

MIZMAZE. n. f. [A cant word, formed from maze by reduplication.] A maze; a labyrinth.
Those who are accustomed to reason have got the true key of books, and the clue to lead them through the mizmaze of variety of opinions and authors to truth. Locke.

MIZZEN. n. f. [mizzen, Dut. h.]
The mizzen is a mast in the stern or back back of a ship: in some large ships there are two such masts, that standing next the main mast is called the main mizzen, and the other near the poop the bonaventure mizzen: the length of a mizzen mast is half that of the main mast, or the height of it is the same with that of the maintop mast from the quarter-deck, and the length of the mizzen topmast is half that. Bail.
A commander at sea had his leg fractured by the fall of his mizzen topmast. Wijeman's Surgery.

MIZZY. n. f. A bog; a quagmire.

Their ivory lutes lay by.
With oxbows and oxyokes, with other things mo,
For oxtrem and horletem in plough for to go. Tusser.

MO. adv. Further; longer.
Sing no more ditties, sing no mo
Of dumps so dull and heavy;
The frauds of men were ever so,
Since Summer was first leafy. Shakespeare.

To MOAN. v. a. [from mœnan, Saxon, to grieve.] To lament; to deplore.
To MOAN. v. n. To grieve; to make lamentation.
The gen'rous band redressive search'd
Into the horrors of the gloomy jail,
Unpitied and unheard, where misery means. Thomson.

MOAN. n. f. [from the verb.] Lamentation; audible sorrow; grief expressed in words or cries.
I have disabled mine estate,
By shewing something a more swelling port,
Than my faint means would grant continuance;
Nor do I now make mean to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate. Shakespeare. Merchant of Venice.
The fresh stream ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;
The salt tears fell from her, and soft'ned the stones. Shak.
Sullen moans,
Hollow groans,
And cries of tortur'd ghosts. Pope's St. Cecilia.

MOAT. n. f. [moite, French, a mound; moza, low Latin.] A canal of water round a house or castle for defence.
